Police worried over assaults and burglaries

Vancouver police say they are concerned with the increase of physical assaults and burglaries plaguing Vancouver in recent months.

The police department is increasing patrols near apartment complexes during the evening, according to department spokesperson Marla Schuman.

Schuman says residents are urged to follow common safety tips, such as keeping doors and windows locked and valuables and vehicles secured. Walking or running with a partner is encouraged.

Since April 29 there have been six reported incidents in which girls or women on the street or in their homes, have been assaulted.
