Vancouver's first full-time rabbi establishes local Jewish education and outreach center

Israeli-born Shmuel Greenberg and his wife, Tzivia, have established the Chabad Center for Jewish Education and Outreach in Vancouver, at 105 NE 106th Street.

Greenberg, 27, who received his rabbinic ordination from the Rabbinical Seminary, Brooklyn, N.W., is the first rabbi to assume full-time Jewish religious duties in Clark County. He has conducted Jewish outreach activities in New York, Ohio, Texas, and served as an intern rabbi of the Jewish community in Odessa, Ukraine.

Mrs. Greenberg, 25, received her teaching degree from Beth Rivka Teacher's College, Kfar Chabad, Israel. She has directed children's and students' programs in Italy, South Africa, Russia, Israel and in her home town, Morristown, N.J. Mrs. Greenberg is a scholar on the Jewish live-chat website, askmoses.com.

The Chabad Center will provide programs to facilitate the needs of local Jewish residents but will not provide regular religious services.

The first program will be "Rosh Hashana in the Park: A High Holiday Experience for the Whole Family," at 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 28, at the Salmon Creek Park.

"Chabad welcomes every single Jew, regardless of background or affiliation," says Rabbi Greenberg. For further information, call 576-8184.

Classical music takes over Esther Short Park Saturday

Riverview Community Bank and the City of Vancouver's third annual free outdoor concert in Esther Short Park is at 7 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 6.

From Tchaikovsky to West Side Story, the concert, under the direction of music director and conductor Salvador Brotons, promises an eclectic evening for attendees. Karen Stanley guest conducts an excerpt from Carmen.

Gospel choir punctuates Saturday mass during Vancouver Sausage Fest

The St. Joseph Parish grounds of the Vancouver Sausage Fest usually quiet down a little for the regular 5 p.m. mass in the church, but worshipers are treated to music a few decibels higher than usual.

Music for the mass begins at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 6. The Community Catholic Choir, Tacoma, and the St. Joseph church choir, conducted by Maria Manzo, both perform church music.

The 32nd Sausage Fest, a money maker for the St. Joseph Parish school, opens today from 5 p.m. to midnight, runs from 10 a.m. to midnight Saturday, and 1 to 10 p.m. Sunday.

Johnny Limbo and the Lugnuts performs in the beer garden at 6 p.m. Sunday.

Admission, except for a cover charge in the beer garden during the evening, is free. The fest features arts, crafts, food, entertainment and a carnival. Shuttle service from free parking at the McLoughlin Middle School and
