Deb Wallace named director of business expansion for CREDC

Deb Wallace, Democratic state representative for the 17th District, will join Columbia River Economic Development Council August 4, as director of business expansion.

She succeeds Brett Rogers, who resigned to take the job of associate director of the Washington Small Business Development Center in Spokane.

Wallace most recently was with the state Department of Transportation where she managed the agency's growth management activities in Southwest Washington.

In her new position, Wallace will be calling on our businesses to identify opportunities and barriers to their expansion. She will also work with the Washington Manufacturing Service, Workforce Development Council and the Washington Technology Center.

New Edge Networks offers free lunch and seminar on high speed-internet service

Vancouver's New Edge Networks is offering a free lunch and seminar on high-speed Internet service at noon Thursday, July 17, in its 3000 Columbia House Boulevard headquarters.

Among other things, the seminar will show how to evaluate and select reliable broadband providers and broadband alternatives, and how to connect multiple users and multiple offices, according to New Edge's alternate channel manager Joe Allen.

For further information, call Harmony Coburn, 906-9882.

Public planning session for 88-acre sports field complex near fairgrounds is Thursday

An open house, designed to elicit opinions on how Vancouver-Clark Parks and Recreation should develop a proposed 88-acre sports field complex is from 4:30 to 8 p.m. Thursday, July 17, in the Chinook Elementary School Cafeteria, 1900 NW Bliss Road.

The 88-acre parcel is west of the Clark County fairgrounds and is being planned as a regional facility with tournament-level sports facilities.

Two breakout sessions are planned at 5 p.m., one for youth groups, the other for sports organizations. "We are especially interested in hearing from youth in the community on this project," says project manager David Sacamano. For further information, call Sacamano at 619-1118.
