Hamilton Construction, Springfield gets first nickel funding project in Washington

The first Washington state highway project to be funded by the state's new 5-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax has been awarded to Hamilton Construction, Springfield, Ore.

The nearly $26 million project, to widen Interstate 5 from NE 99th Street to I-205, begins later this month or early in August, according to Don Owings, area engineer for the state Department of Transportation.

One new travel lane and one new auxiliary lane will be added to each side of the highway. The auxiliary lanes will allow motorists to more easily enter and exit the freeway to and from the exchanges at NE 99th Street and NE 134th Street, Owings says.

Medical center answering cancer questions

A four-week series of programs designed to provide basic information about cancer, cancer treatment, managing treatment side effects, and community resources begins at 4 p.m. Tuesday, July 8, in the Southwest Washington Medical Center Cancer Center Conference Room, 505 NE 87th Avenue, Suite 350.

This series continues for the next three Tuesdays of July and is repeated during the first four Tuesdays of each month, reports medical center spokesperson, Ken Cole.

The series is designed for newly diagnosed cancer patients and their caregivers and support persons. Required registration can be made by calling 514-2174.

People with disabilities to get job training help through $300,000 grant

The Southwest Washington Workforce Development Council and Columbia River Mental Health Services have been awarded a $300,000 grant from the U.S. Department of Labor to remove barriers to employment for people with disabilities.

The grant will be administered by CRMHS. Training for people with disabilities will be provided through the SWWDC.

The focus of the program is to eliminate barriers that previously might have kept those in the disabled community from meeting employment goals, according to Lisa Nisenfeld, SWWDS executive director, and BJohn Magnano, executive director of CRMHS.
