Southwest Washington federal law enforcement center to open Monday

U.S. Rep. Brian Baird (D-3rd) will help open the new Federal Investigative Center at 500 W 12th Street at 1:30 p.m. Monday, Nov. 10.

Baird lead an effort to incorporate federal agents in a single office in Vancouver.

The center will be staffed by agents from the U.S. Marshals Service, Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement, Drug Enforcement Administration, U.S. Secret Service, and the U.S. Postal Inspection Service.

Until the Vancouver center is opened Tacoma is the closest federal center serving southern Washington.

Federal Bureau of Investigation and Internal Revenue Services also have offices in Vancouver.

Nancy Baker's lead in Vancouver Port District race insurmountable

Although fewer than 200 votes separate Port of Vancouver candidate Nancy Baker from incumbent commissioner Tom Bradley remaining votes to be counted by the Clark County Elections Department are not expected to reverse the outcome, reports Tim Likness elections supervisor.

Nor are any of the other outcomes reported earlier from the Tuesday, Nov. 4 general election expected to change.

Other close races are for mayor of La Center, where Jim Irish leads Richard Curtis 213 to 206, and the Yacolt City Council Position 4, Ronnie Stewart, 74, Laura Lee Van Tassell, 67.

Nor will any of the races be close enough—within one-half of one percent—to trigger a recount, Likness says.
