Improving childhood health is local priority, health advisory council says

Childhood health is the overriding health priority in Clark County, reports Joan Caley, chair of the Clark County Public Health Advisory Council.

The council's recommendations guide the county Health Department's activities through the year.

Caley says, "While other issues were also important to us, this one rose to the top. Concerns voiced by the council are immunizations, secondhand smoke exposure, growth and development, injury prevention and other preventive services."

Other concerns expressed by the council include access to critical public health services, public health services at schools, child care center and adult care facilities, and zoonotic diseases (diseases that come from animals).

Traffic controllers to practice at fairgrounds

Traffic signals at the NE 179th Street-Interstate 5 interchange will be turned off for three hours beginning at 3 p.m. Sunday, April 4, for a test of event flagging operations by Coast to Coast, a traffic control company hired by the Amphitheater at Clark County.

The test will affect traffic on NE 179th Street and Delfel Road. County officials, however, say motorists should not experience any significant delays.

The first event of this year at the amphitheater will be Easter services Sunday, April 11.
