Construction of Legacy Salmon Creek Hospital, at NE 139th Street east of NE 20th Avenue underway for the past year is on target for a mid-2005 opening, according to Legacy Health System spokesperson Maggie Huffman.

Huffman says the six-story hospital, the medical office building, and 1,500-vehicle parking lot will be completed simultaneously.

In addition to acute care and emergency facilities, the hospital will offer neo-natal intensive care and cancer diagnosis and treatment.

The main access road from NE 20th Avenue, 139th Street, is being improved and a new access street, NE 23rd Avenue, is being built to connect to NE 134th Street.

The hospital complex, which will employ about 900 when in full operation, is owned by Portland-based nonprofit Legacy Health System, which also operates five hospitals, including Emanuel and Good Samaritan Medical Centers.

Baugh Construction, Portland, general contractor, and subcontractors have 275 workers at the site.

Southwest Washington Medical Center's expansion planning, approved by the state Health Department at the same time Legacy earned approval for the Salmon Creek hospital, is already underway, with additional parking now in use.

Construction of a new eight-story patient tower at its Mill Plain campus, as well as additional covered parking, including valet parking, is expected to begin early next year.

Cost of SWMC's expansion will be $142 million.

The medical center is Clark County's largest employer, with over 3,100 employees.

Kaiser Permanente, which has several medical offices and clinics in Clark County, has announced it expects to build a new hospital either in the Portland metropolitan area, possibly in Clark County.

More than 2,500 vehicles are expected to arrive for the service that begins at 1 p.m. The traffic plan will be in effect from 11 a.m. until 5 p.m.
