

Roberto Gutierrez named VP of instruction at Clark College

Roberto Gutierrez

Roberto Gutierrez has been appointed vice president of instruction at Clark College. The former dean of instruction at Spokane Community College becomes the chief academic officer for Clark, overseeing credit and non-credit instructional programs. Gutierrez is a Washington State University graduate. He earned his doctorate in education leadership from Oregon State University. Gutierrez succeeds Robert Evans, who had been vice president of instruction for the past two years.

Lisa Pletcher has been named to the new Clark

College position of executive dean of workforce development and continuing education. Pletcher had been executive director of the Pierce County Careers Connection. A graduate of Western Washington University, Pletcher earned a doctorate in education from the University of Washington.

Pletcher will be responsible for increasing continuing education opportunities, including training for business and industry jobs.

Clark County ranked number 1 in the nation for mental health services to children

An evaluation of 62 communities in the United States, each of which received $8 million grants from the Center for Mental Health Services in 1998 gives the Clark County program the top ranking in the United States, according to deputy director of county Department of Community Services Cheri Dolezal.

The grants, which expire in August, were made to give communities opportunities to simplify access to local mental health services for children.

In scoring at the top, the county program got high marks for family focused services and for developing above average children's living arrangements.
