

Jeanne Harris getting Democratic competition in race for Clark County commissioner

Camas attorney John Hagensen today announced he will be a Democratic candidate for Clark County commissioner, District 2, the post currently held by retiring commissioner Democrat Judie Stanton.

Vancouver city councilmember Jeanne Harris earlier on declared she is a candidate, and she has been actively campaigning for the post.

Hagensen and Harris will face off in the Tuesday, Sept. 14, primary election.

Marc Boldt, 17th District Republican state representative, has also expressed an interest in the position.

John Hagensen

Hagensen currently is an elected member of the Port of Camas-Washougal Port Commission and an elected member of the Camas School Board.

Hagensen is a 1973 Camas High School graduate, a graduate of Clark College and Central Washington University, and, following a stint as owner and manager of the family business, Fern Prairie Market, he earned a law degree from Lewis & Clark College.
