Korelin Economics Report goes nationwide

The Korelin Economics Report, aired for the past six years on KUIK AM, 1360, has gone nationwide on the Genesis Communications Network.

National distribution over 130 affiliated radio stations across the United States begins Saturday, April 3.

Founded by Vancouver consultant Alexander Korelin, president and CEO of A. B. Korelin & Associates, the show popular with investor-, CEO- and CFO-listeners, has been in the Portland-Vancouver market since 1990.

Korelin's company advises publicly traded companies on matters of regulatory compliance.

The Korelin Economics Report is hosted by Korelin and KUIK program director Paul Warren.

The report is also popular on the Internet, where archives of the KUIK broadcast generate over 117,000 minutes of Internet listening a month.

The Korelin Economics Report will be heard at its regular Saturday time slot, 11 a.m. on KUIK.

Governor vetoes top-two primary section, thus giving voters a party-based primary

Gov. Gary Locke today signed Senate Bill 6453, creating a Montana primary election system, after vetoing sections of the bill that would have sent the top two candidates, regardless of party affiliation, to the general election.

Under the new primary law, voters will be required to select and use a single-party ballot. However, voters will not register by party. Their choice of party ballot will be confidential.

Had Locke not vetoed the so-called "Louisiana primary" sections, the top two primary candidates, possibly from the same political party, would have advanced to the general election.

Locke said, "I must reiterate my extreme frustration and disappointment with the Republican and Democratic parties for challenging the constitutionality of the blanket primary in the first place. The blank primary has served our state well for almost 70 years."

The blanket primary was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, and Washington would have been without a primary election had not the legislature acted.

There are no changes in the state's general election laws.

The new system will be in place for the Sept. 14 primary this year.
