Local political season starts early; VEA executive board recommends Pridemore

Following the lead at the national level, local politics is beginning to heat up in Clark County.

The Vancouver Education Association's executive board today announced it is recommending to its 1,300 members Democrat Clark County commissioner Craig Pridemore for the 49th Legislative District senate position currently held by Republican Don Carlson.

The VEA, which represents teachers in the Vancouver School District, does not formally endorse candidates for public office. Instead, the organization's executive board makes a recommendation to its membership after reviewing qualifications and interviewing candidates.

VEA president Phil Harding said, "We believe Pridemore will be a strong leader from the day he enters the senate and for many years to come."

The executive board had supported Carlson for the past 12 years.

Carlson, completing his first term as senator, is chair of the Senate Higher Education Committee and a member of the Senate Education Committee.

Pridemore, in the middle of his second four-term on the three-member county board of commissioners, announced he would run for Carlson's job in February.

Largest plant sale in the region part of 2004 Home and Garden Idea Fair

Clark Public Utilities' all-volunteer, three-day Home and Garden Idea Fair at the Clark County Fairgrounds will again feature the largest plant sale in the Vancouver-Portland metropolitan region.

The fair, originated by the utility in 1991 to help promote wise use of electricity, has grown into one of southern Washington's major events. Attendance this year could breach the 50,000 mark.

The fair dates are Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 23 through 25. Admission is free, but there will be a charge for parking.

Clark College joins national campaign to motivate students to attend college

Clark College is one of 24 colleges and universities in the nation, and the only community college in the Pacific Northwest, called to participate in the national College Is Possible Initiative.

The campaign targets middle and high school students with information on financial assistance and academic preparation.

Clark's role in the initiative begins in southwest Washington with meetings between the college and middle and high school administrators.

Successful strategies developed locally will be shared nationally.
