

David Kelly named president of Southwest Washington Medical Center Foundation

David Kelly, general manager of Northwest Home Care, Portland, and a member of the Southwest Washington Medical Center Foundation since 1995, has been elected president of the foundation board.

Kelly, who is also chair of the regional American Heart Association Board serving ten western states, will lead the foundation in a major fundraising drive planned to support enhancements at the medical center.

Kelly succeeds Brett Bryant, who has been president of the foundation for the past six years. Bryant, who will remain on the foundation board as immediate past president, says, "I wanted to get the Ray Hickey Hospice House up and running. Now it's time to let someone else have some fun."

Kelly had been secretary to the board, a position that has been filled by retired cardiologist Stan Freidberg. Friedberg has been a member of the foundation since 2000.

Randy Grove has been reelected board vice president, and Laurie Kusch, reelected treasurer.

The foundation is the primary fundraising arm of the medical center and manages over $9 million to benefit programs including Healthy Steps Women & Children's Clinic, Cardiac Care, Hospice, Cancer Care, Diabetes Education, and Physical Rehab.

Archaeologists locate 1832 magazine in fort; public invited to watch the dig

Professional and student archaeologists from two universities have found the remains of an 1832 powder magazine in the southeast corner of the Fort Vancouver National Historic Site.

The powder magazine was the only brick building at the Hudson's Bay Company's Fort Vancouver.

National Park Service archaeologists and students from Washington State University Vancouver and Portland State University have unearthed the rock and mortar foundations of the structure.

The bricks were imported from England, and the mortar was made from ground-up coral imported from the Hawaiian Islands.

The archaeologists have found large pieces of coral and hand-forged square nails.

An 1844 inventory lists over 14,000 pounds of gun powder in 158 barrels and kegs. The gun powder was sold to employees, missionaries, native Americans, American settlers and members of fur brigades, according to the NPS, which is in charge of the fort site.

The public is welcome to visit the dig between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, July 31. For further information, call Douglas Wilson, 921-5241.

Insider prints news before it happens

Insider readers regularly get news that is as much as 14 hours newer than that of the other print media, whose daily deadlines are about 11 p.m. the night before.

The Insider often gives its readers their first information on breaking news stories. "Read it here first," ought to be our slogan.

However, the story in our Tuesday, July 13, editions about the Vancouver Lake Watershed Partnership accepting applications from the public for roles with the partnership was premature. The lead agencies are still working out how the partnership will develop. Likely they will seek applications, in the very near future, but thus far they are not.
