

Deputy Mayor Sandra Hall leaving Battle Ground council

Sandra Hall, Battle Ground deputy mayor, has resigned from the city council for personal reasons, citing that her family and her job need close attention.

Hall was elected to position 2 on the council in 2001 to fill a vacancy and was re-elected for a second term in 2004. She was elected by the council to be deputy mayor in 2004 and again in 2006.

Hall is not a candidate for re-election to position 2 on the council this year. The term expires at the end of this year.

The Battle Ground council will determine how to fill the vacancies on the council that will exist until January 2008.

County commissioners to air Steve Stuart's development rights proposal November 6

Clark County commissioner Steve Stuart has proposed that Clark County follow guidelines of a Transfer of Development Rights program in force in several Washington counties that gives property owners the right to use, build on, or transfer or sell development rights to a third party.

The TDR program would provide fungible value to agricultural property that is otherwise not developable.

The county's newly adopted Comprehensive Growth Management Program created 12,023 acres of property into revised growth management boundaries, including 4,218 acres zoned for agricultural uses.

County commissioners are holding a hearing on the proposal at 10 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 5.

Jewish writer series opens at Three Creeks Library next week

Three Creeks Library and the Shalom Chapter of Hadassah are bringing three Jewish authors to the Library at 800-C NE Tenney Road during National Jewish Book Month, in November.

Alter Wiener will speak about his autobiography, From a Name to a Number, at 2:30 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 8. Wiener is one of the very few Holocaust survivors still active in the Portland area.

At 7 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 15, author and Willamette University visiting assistant professor Scott Nadelson will speak about his two books of fiction, Saving Stanley: The Brickman Stories, winner of the Oregon Book Award for short fiction and the Great Lakes Colleges Association New writers Award, and The Cantor's Daughter, winner of the Samuel Goldberg & Sons Fiction Prize for Emerging Jewish Writers, and the Oregon Book Award for Short Fiction.

The final program of the series at 7 p.m. Monday 19, is a presentation by well-known Portland author and storyteller Eric Kimmel, author of more than 50 titles since his first book appeared in 1974. Kimmel will discuss how he chooses his themes.

There is no attendance charge, and books by each author will be available for sale. For further information, call 571-9696.

The $35-per-person function is sponsored by the Clark County Historical Society, the history clubs of Washington State University Vancouver and Clark College, and the associated students as WSU Vancouver.

Students will be admitted for $25.

No problemo

Clark County has teamed up with a telephone interpretive service proficient in 170 languages to assist calls between non-English-speaking or nonfluent English-speaking customers and all county departments and services.

Whether on the telephone or in person, non-English speakers can be connected with county officials and can talk to them and get answers in their native language.

The service was recommended by the county Diversity Advisory Committee. Nearly one in five county residents are non-native English speakers.
