

Gardeners needed for new food garden program

Gardeners who are interested in increasing community access to healthy foods are invited to sign up for the Growing Groceries Mentor Program, a training series designed to help gardeners gain additional knowledge and skills to use in helping others grow produce at home or in community garden programs.

The four-part training will be held on Saturdays Jan. 23, Feb. 20, March 27, and April 24, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the second floor conference room at the Center for Community Health, 1601 E. 4th Plain Blvd., Vancouver. A $50 fee covers the four training sessions and introductory course materials. An optional $5 CD includes additional publications and resources. Participants are encouraged to bring a sack lunch.

Training topics include the following: selecting a garden site, vegetable gardening, irrigation and soils, pest management, working with community groups, technical resources.

After completing the training, participants are encouraged to share their knowledge; they can be matched with neighborhood associations, schools, faith-based and emergency food organizations, and community garden sites.

To register online, visit <https://ocrs.wsu.edu/Signup/?eventid=585>. For more information, contact Ariel Rivers at 360-397-8000, ext. 7388 or ariel.rivers@clark.wa.gov. Scholarships may be available.

The Growing Groceries Mentor Program is sponsored by Clark County Public Health, Washington State University Vancouver, and Vancouver-Clark Parks & Recreation.

Treetalk workshop: Recognizing hazardous trees

During winter storms many residents become concerned about the condition and safety of large trees. Careful understanding and management of tree defects create a safer environment, reduce liability, and help when prioritizing tree care.

All trees have the potential to fail, but only a relative few actually do. "Just because a tree is mature doesn't mean it will fail," says Charles Ray, Urban Forester for the City of Vancouver. "Most trees fail because of an existing defect." Defects include decay, cankers and root problems, which often can be identified by a certified arborist.

From 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Jan. 26, a free TreeTalk Workshop is being held to help people learn to recognize hazards while taking proper corrective actions to protect themselves and the trees. A local certified arborist and tree risk assessor will be on-hand to lead the discussion and answer tree care questions.

The workshop is part of TreeTalk, a series of free, all-about-trees, educational workshops, presented by Vancouver Urban Forestry, a division of the Department of Public Works.

Register in advance by calling 619-1108, or email urbanforestry@ci.vancouver.wa.us. For more information, visit www.cityofvancouver.us/urbanforestry.

Denise McFadden "Watercolors" to open at Art on the Boulevard

Art on the Boulevard, a fine art gallery in the Vancouver Marketplace, will open a new show featuring the watercolors of Denise McFadden on February 5th.

McFadden's watercolors are saturated with light and color. Her new works include several new "woven" paintings, where two like paintings have been cut into strips and woven together to create one painting.

McFadden majored in graphic art at the American Academy of Art in Chicago. For twelve years she worked as a graphic artist for advertising firms in Chicago and Colorado. Since moving to Vancouver in 1993, McFadden has chosen watercolor as her medium.

McFadden is a member of the Southwest Washington Watercolor Society, the Northwest Watercolor Society, and the National Watercolor Society. She has won prizes for her work, which has appeared in numerous shows.

The First Friday evening reception on February 5th is from 5 to 9 p.m. and is open to the public at no charge. McFadden will be in attendance. The show runs through February 27.

Art on the Boulevard is open to the public Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and on First Fridays till 9 p.m. For further information, contact the gallery at 750-4499.
